Q3. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below.

Solar energy is used for heating, cooking, making electricity, and even taking salt out of saltwater so the water can be drinkable and used for additional purposes that do not need the salt. Solar power uses sunlight that hits the solar thermal panels to convert the sunlight to heat either air or water. One advantage of solar power is that it is renewable. As long as there is sunlight, you will be able to harness the power from it. There is also no pollution and it can be used efficiently to heat and light things. You can see the benefits of solar energy in heating swimming pools, spas, and water tanks in many cities across the country.

(a) What are the different uses of solar energy?

(b) Write any three advantages of solar power.

(c) Can salt water be made drinkable by solar energy?

(d) Write true or false
